Forecast For Scotland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Wednesday 10 Mar 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
A bright start, but rain pushing northeast.

Today:
It will be a mainly dry and bright start, although a few blustery showers in the northwest. However, wet and windy weather will push northeast during the day. Gales at times around the coast.

Tonight:
Rain or squally showers, heavy at times. Windy with coastal gales. The showers more scattered by the end of the night, becoming mainly dry in the east.

Thursday:
Feeling cold with heavy, blustery showers, these falling as snow over the hills. The risk of hail and the odd rumble of thunder. Drier and brighter spells in the east.

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Cold and windy with heavy blustery showers during Friday. Early rain and hill snow in the south on Saturday, otherwise bright with scattered showers over the weekend. Night frosts.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.